WASHINGTON CITY.

[From Mark Twain's "Gilded Age."]. Washington is an interesting city to any of us. It seems to become more and more interesting the oftener we visit it. Perhaps the reader has never been there? Very well. You arrive either at night, rather too late to do anything or see anything until morning, before you have been in Washington many or you arrive so carly in the morning that you consider it best to go to your hotel and her, too. along over the Atlantic. You cannot well arrive at a pleasant intermediate hour, because the railway corporation that keeps the keys of the only door that leads into the town or out of it takes care of that. You arrive in tolerably good spirits, because it is the capital, and so you have only been insulted three times (provided you are not in a sleeping-car—the average is higher there): once when you renewed your ticket after stopping over in Baltimore, once when you were about to enter the "ladies' car" without knowing it was a ladies' car, and once when you asked the conductor at what hour you would reach Washington.

You are assailed by a long rank of hackmen who shake their whips in your face as that street and had nearly passed by an Empor step out upon the sidewalk. You enter pire Jewelry store. At a time the act of a what they regard as a "carriage" in the capital, and you wonder why they do not tained several valuable articles from the take it out of service and put it in the museum. We have few enough antiquities, and attraction just had made my walking onit is little to our credit that we make scarcely ward slower. Till something might be reach your hotel presently (and here let us draw the curtain of charity), because, of As he took that case from the front and course, you have gone to the wrong one. carried upon his shoulder with ease and You being a stranger, how could you do otherwise? There are a hundred and eighhour and eighbour and eighbour a first are a hundred and eighbour are a hundre teen bad hotels, and only one good one. The going down St. Charles street by himself. most renowned and popular hotel of them But I stopped at the corner between St. all is perhaps the worst one known to his- Charles street and Fifth street for a few

it was snowing. When you reached the thing while there was nobody present in hotel it was sleeting. When you went to such a dealing with him as might be exbed it was raining. During the night it froze hard, and the wind blew some chimneys down. When you got up in the morn-You naturally wish to view the city; so you take an umbrella, an overcoat, and a fan, and go forth. The prominent features man inside: 'Are you Mr. Freedman, sir' you soon locate and get familiar with ; first, He said, 'No ; up-stairs.' you glimpse the ornamental upper works of a long, snowy palace projecting above a robbery to him, and whereupon he took me grove of trees, and a tall, graceful white along with him out of that store, and went dome with a statue on it surmounting the palace and pleasantly contrasting with the background of blue sky. That building is the capitol; gossips will tell you that by the original estimates it was to cost $12,000,000, and that the Government did not come within $27,200,000 of building it for that

You stand at the back of the capitol to treat yourself to a view, and it is a very noble one. You understand, the capitol stands upon the verge of a high piece of table-land, a fine, commanding position, and its front looks cut over this noble situation for a city; looks cut over this noble situation for a city; look-keeper. I never saw the thief before until the day he stole it with him. Nor did not the look-keeper with look-keeper until the day he stole it with him. property-owners at once advanced their prices to such inhuman figures that the peo-ple went down and built the city in the muddy low marsh behind the temple of liberty; so now the lordly front of the building, with its imposing colonnades, its projecting, graceful wings, its picturesque groups of statuary, and its long terraced ranges of steps, flowing down in white marble waves to the ground, merely looks out upon a sorrowful little desert of cheap boardinghouses.

So you observe that you take your view from the back of the capitol; and yet not from the airy outlooks of the dome, by the way, because to get there you must pass through the great rotunda, and to do that you would have to see the marvellous his torical paintings that hang there and the basreliefs - and what have you done that you should suffer thus? And, besides, you might have to pass through the old part of the building, and you could not help seeing Mr. Lincoln, as petrified by a young lady artist for $10,000—and you might take his marble emancipation proclamation, which he holds out in his hand and contemplates, for a folded napkin, and you might conceiv from his expression and his attitude that he is finding fault with the washing. Which is not the case. Nobody knows what is the matter with him, but everybody feels for him. Well, you ought not to go into the dome anyhow, because it would be impossi-ble to go up there without seeing the fresco in it-and why should you be interested in the delirium tremens of art?

The capitol is a very noble and a very beautiful building, both within and without, but you need not examine it now. Still, if you greatly prefer going into the dome. go. Now, your general glance gives you picture que sketches of gleaming water on your left, with a sail here and there, and a lunatic asylum on shore; over beyond the water, on a distant elevation, you see a squat yellow temple, which your eye dwells upon lavingly through a blur of unmanly mois-ture, for it recalls your lost boyhood and the Partheneous done in molasses-candy which made it blest and beautiful. Still in the distance, but on this side of the water and close to its edge, the monument of the Father of his Country towers out of the mud-sacred soil is the customary term. It has the aspect of a factory chimney with the top broken off. The skeleton of a decaying scaffold lingers about its summit, and tradi tion says that the spirit of Washington often comes down and sits on those rafters to enjoy this tribute of respect which the nation has reared as the symbol of its unappeasable gratitude. The monument is to be finished some day, and at that time our Washington will have risen still higher in the nation's veneration, and will be known as the Great-Great-Grandfather of his country. The memorial chimney stands in a quiet pastoral locality that is full of reposeful expression. With a glass you can see the cow-sheds about the base, and the contented sheep nibbling pebbles in the desert solitude that surround it, and the tired pigs dozing in the holy calm of its protecting

Now you wrench your gaze loose and you look down in front of you and see the broad Pennsylvania avenue stretching straight ahead for a mile or more till it brings up against the iron fence in front of a pillared granite pile—the Treasury building—an edi-ace that would command respect in any capital. The stores and botels that wall in this broad avenue are mean and cheap and dingy, and are better left without comment. Beyoud the Treasury is a fine, large, white barn, with wide, unbandsome grounds about it. The President lives there. It is ugly enough outside, but that is nothing to what it is inside. Dreariness, filmsiness, had taste reduced to mathematical completeness, is what the inside offers to the eye, if it remains yet what it always has been.

The front and right-hand view gives you the city at large. It is a wide stretch of cheap little brick houses, with here and there a noble architectural pile lifting itself | DRIME 1878 HOPS.

these. If the thaw is still going on when you come down and so about town you will wonder at the abort-sightedness of the city fathers when you come to inspect the streets in that they do not dilute the mud a little more and use them for canals.

If you inquire around a little you will find there are more boarding houses to the square acre in Washington than there are in any been content to be merely a private citizen, your trunk would have been sufficient security for your board. If you are curious and inquire into this thing, the chances are that your landlady will be ill-natured enough to say that the person and property of a Congressman are exempt from arrest or detention, and that with the tears in her eyes she has seen several of the people's representatives walk off to their several States and Territories carrying her unreceipted boardbills in their pockets for keepsakes. And weeks you will be mean enough to believe

A MUTE'S LINGO-DROLL TESTIMONY OF DEAF AND DUMB MAN REGARDING A THEFT .-John French, charged with stealing a show case, was before the Court of Criminal Correction yesterday, and was held to answer it the sum of $1,000. The most damaging evionly thirty-eight miles from Baltimore to dence against the prisoner was that given by John B. Nalley, a deaf mute, who witnessed the transaction. The witness wrote out his testimony, and as a literary curiosity it is appended: "Here is the evidence I am making to you all. When, after having left an optician's store, wherein I was looking for a pair of spectacles, at 409 north Fifth street, on Tuesday last, but could not find it more fit to my sight than mine I have, I went home down man in taking a show-case in which conminutes to make myself up a mind to think It is winter and night. "There I was led to the book-keeper, and at that time I told him what I had seen, but he did not understand me at first, so I was obliged to call him over with me to see one of the two show-cases standing, disappeared as he did accordingly, and at last he understood it all, and whereupon he was to send one of his fellows away to bring detectives. until the time I made report of the robbery to them."-St. Louis Globe, 24th.

But now Art's foremost son lay dead, But now the oak of Science (el). Now Music mourns her priestess fled, And tuncless peals the tolling bell.

The artist dying left his life In colors warm on canvas writ; We have the fruit of Landseer's strife, His setting sun all time hath lit.

And he, the simple great, the sage Who childlike learned and Godlike taught, Bequeathed to us the wondrous page That tells what Agassiz had wrought.

So when our poets die, the earth Doth of their souls the essence keep. And often 'tis their real birth. This dying, that their lovers weep;

But, oh sweet singer, in your flight
The charm is lost, the music fled—
When trills the bird no more at night.
The answer comes, The echo's dead.

And so some nutouched chords must sleep-The chords that knew thy magic call— Until the sky and earth and deep Chant solemn chorus o'er us all. WILLIAM E. CAMERON.
